

Method 3

For Fallow Deer

Rank on the length of the longest antler.

1. Measure the length of each antler on the outside curve of the main beam from the lowest edge of the burr (coronet) to the tip (A–B). The tape must not be pressed into the groove above the coronet.
2. Measure the circumference of the burr of each antler (C).
3. Measure the circumference of the main beam at the smallest place between brow and second tines, or if the brow tine is lacking (as for example in roe deer) between burr and first front (upper in White-tailed Deer) tine (D).
4. Measure the widest inside span of the main beams at right angles to the long axis of the skull (E).
5. Measure the widest inside span of the antler beams at right angles to the long axis of the skull (F).
6. Count the number of points (tines) 1 inch (or 2.5 cm) or more in length (for Roe and Muntjac 3/4 inch or 2 cm).
